In the Democratic convention yesterday afternoon Samuel Browning, president of the Ogden city council, declined the nomination for state senator. Twice did he refuse the crown, but the convention was determined that he should head the ticket, and the nomination was crammed down his throat.

Even after this was done he stated to the convention that he could not tell at that time whether he would permit his name to go before the people on election day for their suffrage.

In his partial acceptance of the nomination Mr. Browning stated that he is a Democrat through and through and that he meant to stand firmly on the platform of principles uttered by the convention, and that he was one of the Democrats in the country who proposed to see to it that the laws enacted by the state legislature be executed in their entirety.

He said he was against "ring rule" and "pie" Democrats who had gone into the Republican party for the sole purpose of getting a place at the political pie counter. He desired to kill the liquor business and thought this as good a time as any. Mr. Browning said he thought that the people should now declare themselves either for prohibition or local option and then forever keep their peace. The said the legislature of this state, he said, had failed to do the bidding of the people in this respect, and in many others, and he thought it a good idea to get a direct expression from the voters as to whether they want whiskey or no whiskey.

Immediately after the reconvening of the convention in the afternoon the committees made their reports, and the following permanent officers were announced:

Chairman—John Seaman.
Secretary—C. A. Smurthwaite.
Assistant Secretary—O. A. Kennedy.

Not a word of protest was uttered against the platform which was adopted unanimously.

After the routine of receiving the committee reports and adopting them, the convention got down to real democratic business and nominated the ticket.

In the nominating and seconding speeches a great deal was said about the time-honored Democracy and the great men who had led it to defeat from time to time.

Incidentally a few good things were said about the nominees. Most of the nominations, however, were made by acclamation, and the convention seemed to be well pleased that men had been discovered who would make the sacrifice and march to the slaughter.

In the nominations for the legislature A. L. Scoville of Ogden, D. D. McKay of Huntsville, A. E. Pratt of Ogden, S. S. Smith of Ogden, H. Belnap of Ogden and W. J. Taylor of Ogden were named. The result on the first ballot being the nomination of McKay, Pratt and Scoville.

Belnap withdrew from the race and an effort was made to turn the nomination to Talhurst, but the Browning people maintained that, notwithstanding the fact that Smith had offered to withdraw, another ballot should be taken to determine whether Talhurst or Smith should be nominated. In this ballot Smith won out by a vote of 46 to 38.

The other contested nomination was for sheriff, with H. Anderson, W. H. Staker and William Brown in the field. The result of the vote on the first ballot was:

Anderson 79, Staker 9, and Brown 7. Milo Sharp of Plain City was named for the two-year term commissioner against J. Taylor of Harrisville, but he was completely snowed under on the first ballot.

The acclamation nominations were: Browning, senator; Skeen, attorney; Parker, two-year commissioner; Peterson, recorder; Williams, clerk; Farr, treasurer; Trimble, assessor; Jenkins, surveyor; Martin, constable.

In nominating D. D. McKay for the legislature a young school teacher from Huntsville, recently from Ohio, also named Judson Harmon of Ohio to head the Democratic ticket for president in 1912. He also stated that Harmon would be elected governor of Ohio this year, and that D. D. McKay would be one of the representatives in the Utah legislature next year.

Valentine Gideon seconded the nomination of Arthur Pratt for the legislature, and in so doing he advised the convention that he was going to go down to Salt Lake and work—do a little legislative work by way of writing a few paragraphs in the law book of the state, and not turn his attention toward the election of George Sutherland to the United States senate. He said the Republicans on the legislative ticket were nominated for the sole purpose of voting for Sutherland, the same as the Republicans a couple of years ago were sent to the capital for the purpose of voting for Reed Smoot.

The business of the convention was concluded shortly after 6 o'clock, and so rapidly did the delegates leave the convention hall that it was impossible to name the central committee.

BURGLAR ROBS A SHOEMAKER

Police Looking for Man Who Entered Scheufele's Shop and Stole Purse.

An unknown man is being sought by the police for the purloining of the home of Leonard Scheufele, a shoemaker, residing at 286 Twenty-third street. The man entered the rooms of the cobbler and stole a small purse containing $10 in gold.

The money was soon missed, and when a friend, B. R. Battice, noticed a stranger loitering about in the rear of the house, he gave chase. The burglar was a spry fellow, however, and got away after a run of more than a block.

Battice declares he can identify the man if he is captured, and is waiting over in Ogden for that purpose. The police department has been furnished with the description and every officer in the city is on the lookout.

SMYTH PURCHASES VALUABLE SHEEP

Secures Dartmoor Sheep at the International Sheep Show for His Company.

Forty Head of Prize Winners of Valuable Breed Will Remain in Ogden.

In the private sheep sales at the Fair Grounds yesterday afternoon a deal was completed whereby D. A. Smyth of Ogden, on behalf of the Intermountain Land and Live Stock company became the owner of a flock of forty selected Dartmoor rams, which had been imported from England by John Rawlings, the Canadian sheep man.

This sale means more to the Utah breeders than the mere statement would indicate. The sheep are a pedigreed lot, being able to trace their lineage back some three hundred years in one family.

Included in the lot of sheep figuring in the transaction are the sheep from the prize ram of the Royal Sheep Show in England, which animal was imported for show purposes to America in August, 1909, the first Dartmoor ever brought across the seas.

The Dartmoor is a distinctive English variety, and is a very popular breed in that country. The bunch that were sold yesterday were raised and bred by John R. T. Kingwell, North Leids, South Devon, England, in the famous Dartmoor hills.

In February, when they were but ten months old, the sheep in this flock were sheered for the first time, and yielded an average of twelve and a half pounds, after being dipped with the staple of wool thirteen and a half inches long. The Intermountain Land and Live Stock company is an Ogden corporation with a capital of $100,000, and the officers are W. C. Hunter, president and general manager; D. A. Smyth, vice president; Frank Smyth, secretary; Louis Blitten, manager.

The introduction of this breed of rams on the Utah range will tend to build up and strengthen the local sheep, and is expected to bring about wonderful benefits in the way of more and better wool and harder, healthier sheep.

The price paid for this bunch of fancy sheep is not made public, but it is known that the former owners asked a high figure during the week, and would not allow them to be put in the auction sales.

The International Land and Live Stock company is to be congratulated on their enterprise in securing this lot of imported sheep, and their purpose of inter-breeding them with Utah sheep is being praised by every sheep man in the city.
